Dr. Orlando is a fellowship-trained aesthetic, plastic surgeon focused on elective surgical rejuvenation of the face and body.

“I jumped at the chance to be a part of a highly professional, well-trained and reputable cosmetic surgery establishment with close ties to its community,” shared Dr. Orlando, “My experience has been refined through years practicing in Santa Monica, Beverly Hills and Portland, Oregon.”

Growing up in Northeast Ohio, Dr. Orlando enjoyed many of the same opportunities provided right here in the Granite Bay area including music, sports and clubs. He realized he was a visual artist from an early age, a skillset fostered by his supportive parents. His dad was a steelworker who came from Europe in the 1950’s and his mom, a second generation New Yorker, who worked in the public school system.

Heading into college, he considered medicine or fine arts and ended up with dual degrees in both biology and psychology at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland. Prior to attending medical school at Wright State University School of Medicine, he worked at Cleveland Hanna Pavilion Psychiatric Facility. A team of professionals, dedicated to improving each patient’s emotional, psychological, spiritual and social wellbeing, profoundly impacted his understanding of the importance of the patient-doctor relationship.

Heading into medical school, he was still drawn to the arts and wanted to work and create with his hands. He shadowed several plastic surgeons, one in particular focused on elective cosmetic surgery. This provided the perfect blend of science and art and he was set on the path to become a plastic and reconstructive surgeon.

After a six year surgical residency at Oregon Health and Science University in Portland where he fell in love with the natural beauty of the Northwest and spent free time hiking and enjoying landscape photography, he went on to a three year plastic surgery residency at Summa Health System in Akron, Ohio. This set the stage for a prestigious aesthetic surgery fellowship at the University of Southern California, Marina Plastic Surgery and Rox Center located in Beverly Hills and Newport Beach. He has spent the last 6 years in practice, working exclusively on elective surgical rejuvenation of the face and body.

Dr. Orlando said, “I embrace this opportunity to grow as a surgeon, and as part of a fun collaborative team led by the ever gracious and gifted Dr. Christa Clark. In addition to joining Granite Bay Cosmetic Surgery, moving to NorCal affords me the opportunity to see and explore parts of California I have only read about!”

He feels that the very best surgical experience depends on an open, honest and genuine collaboration between patient and surgeon. Through a partnership together, Dr. Orlando works to help realize surgical expectations, promote healthy choices, foster a positive self-image and develop life-long relationships.

Dr. Orlando specializes in face and body aesthetic surgery with an emphasis on breast augmentation, lift, reduction, liposuction, fat grafting, gluteal augmentation - Brazilian Butt Lift, tummy tuck and plastic surgery following extreme weight loss.
